Terrain

E1 sprint	Typical urban terrain: housing estates with block houses, single-family residential areas, parks, courtyards of public buildings. Most of the terrain is completely flat, but some parts are moderate steep. Very good visibility and runnability.
night shortened long	Varied terrain, with different levels of runnability, visibility and steepness. Partly rich in contour details, the remains of quarries and former coal mining occur on the terrain.
E2 middle	Varied terrain, with different levels of runnability. Steep slopes. Partly rich in contour details: a dense network of erosion gullies, re-entrants and dry ditches. Partly reduced visibility and runnability, although it's much better in mid-spring than in summer.
3x3 relay	Urban area: open-air bath, youth camp, parks, sport fields, pump track, etc. Very good visibility and runnability.
E3 long	Varied terrain, with different levels of runnability. Some parts are newly logged and overgrown felled areas. Mostly significant height differences and steep slopes. The terrain can be divided into three parts: one of them with large, striking relief forms; second one as described for the E2 middle race; third one with less height differences, partly rich in contour details and water features, the remains of quarries and former coal mining occur on this part of the terrain. Partly reduced visibility and runnability, although it's much better in mid-spring than in summer.
